

Walking by Faith

A Seven-Day Journey Through Romans 8, Psalm 23
and Hebrews 11

The Dwelling

Welcome Letter

Dear Friend,

Welcome. Perhaps you have come carrying questions, weariness, hope, or a longing to slow down. Faith is not certainty about every outcome. Faith is learning to trust the character of God when the path ahead remains partially hidden. Allow these pages to become a sanctuary in time. Read slowly, listen deeply, and remember that God is already present.

How to Use This Devotional

This devotional is designed to be experienced slowly. Read the Scripture. Linger with the reflection. Sit with the questions. Pray honestly. There is no need to perform. The invitation is simply to dwell with God.

Day 1

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Day 2

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Day 3

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Day 4

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Day 5

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Day 6

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Day 7

Scripture • Reflection • Pause & Notice • Journal • Prayer • Gentle Practice

Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart. Faith grows not through striving but through relationship. As we slow down, we begin to recognise that God has been present in both the ordinary and the difficult moments of our lives. The invitation today is not to manufacture certainty, but to rest in the faithfulness of Christ. Sit with the passage. Notice what stirs within you. Allow truth to move from your mind into your heart.

Closing Reflection

As this journey comes to an end, the invitation remains. Faith is not something we master. It becomes a way of walking. There will be seasons of clarity and seasons of uncertainty, yet God remains faithful in them all. The journey continues, one step at a time, held by grace.

Blessing for the Journey

May you recognise God's presence in ordinary places, discover peace in uncertainty, and rest in His unchanging love. Amen.